RESEARCH INTERESTS

German literary history, eighteenth century to the present; dissertation on eighteenth-century German literature; more than 25 articles in scholarly journals and anthologies; particular interest in the cultural politics of Romanticism. Works in this field have increasingly included comparative perspectives.

Multilingual philology; in the last five years, organization of eight conferences and panel series in the framework of bigger conferences; co-editor of four scholarly anthologies, including one systematic compendium on multilingualism and literature, and of two special issues of scholarly journals; author of 10 journal articles as well as 17 book chapters.

Literary, media and culture theory (substantial parts of the dissertation, two recent programmatic articles in peer-reviewed journals). T. D. has developed a theory on the function of paratext for (narrative) literature (PhD dissertation), a theory of verse in its relation to language difference, and a (philological) theory of culture that also includes a concept of cultural politics (see an international conference organised on the topic in 2014). Methodological work in the interrelation between literary form, historical semantics and culture politics. Co-editor of a compendium on media of literature.

History of philology and linguistics; two articles in scholarly anthologies; book in preparation.
